DESIDERED AID TO MADERO

Mexican Journalists Rage Over Arrest of General Reyes on Charge of Violating Neutrality Laws, While Man Who Led Attack on Diaz Was Not Molested Even After Issuing Manifesto From American Soil. Wilson Explains Situation.

Mexico City, Nov. 27.—Fear is expressed by the Mexican press that the United States will feel called upon to interfere in the affairs of this republic.

Everywhere the greatest ill feeling is cropping out in the columns of the native press and the opinion prevails that the United States is carefully laying plans for interference. Quotations from two papers in the national capital show the spirit manifested. El País says: "It is unquestioned that there was aid for Madero in the United States and that there is persecution for Reyes, a persecution which stands as a solitary example in the political history of the neighboring nation."

"As soon as Madero arrived in Texas after escaping from San Luis he issued a species of proclamation manifestly revolutionary. There was no tribunal to call him to account for this act. Later he introduced arms, ammunition and other warlike material, all that he wanted, without hindrance on the part of the American government."

Reyes has published no proclamation, he has not declared himself an enemy of the government of Mexico, and yet he is arrested and subjected to judicial procedure, and the first straband of war is caught and seized.

Tremble on Brink of Abyss. "Is not the partiality clear? And is it possible to conceive of Yankee partiality without some mercantile or interested motive and without an equivalent? For the present, we tremble at the brink of the abyss."

El Diario says: "The bird of evil hovers over the frontiers of Mexico and its name is intervention." The American ambassador has made an attempt to set the natives right. In a statement he says: "I am surprised and somewhat chagrined that the activity of my government in enforcing the neutrality laws of the frontier, clearly in the interest of peace and order in Mexico, should inspire hostile and ungenerous comment."

In enforcing its neutrality laws on the frontier with utmost rigor and in punishing all violators of Mexican law, operating from American territory, the American government discharges the highest obligation of a friendly government. The attempt of these newspapers to show a difference between the attitude observed by the American government during the Madero revolution and at the present moment, is a credit to neither of them, as both would understand that the circumstances then and now are entirely different."

KILLS HIS WIFE AND HER LOVER

Italian Sees Headless Specters and Confesses Crime.

Kenosha, Wis., Nov. 27.—Tortured by the mental picture of his headless wife and her paramour, whom he slew, Pasquale Marchesi, 27, a merchant, went to a priest and confessed the double crime, which theretofore had not been discovered. He chopped off the heads of his victims with a hatchet. The young avenger of his honor was turned over to the police, who are closely guarding him for fear of possible mob violence.

After committing the crime he began wandering about the city. As morning began to dawn the specters that had haunted Marchesi all night as he slunk through the back streets drove him to hide in the basement of an Italian Catholic church. In the darkness of the church basement, he said, he heard the death cries of his wife and saw horrid forms of headless persons rushing at him through the darkness.

The services consisted of a brief prayer, words of consolation for the grieved relatives in that Beattie had embraced the saving grace of God's power before his death, and a song. The pallbearers were selected by Beattie previous to the execution day.

POPE IS WELL PLEASED WITH RECORD

Tells Archbishop O'Connell American Catholics Real Thing.

Rome, Nov. 27.—Cardinal-designate William H. O'Connell of Boston had an audience with the pope. His holiness was most cordial and had a long private talk with the archbishop. The latter then presented the delegation which accompanied him. The pope made an address to the visitors in which he said that he had watched with solicitude and gratification the growth of Catholicism in Boston, of which he had seen many evidences. American Catholics, said the pontiff, unlike those of Europe, were not Catholics in name only. The pope said he was convinced that Cardinal-designate O'Connell would promote an even greater development of the church in the United States.

Main Door of the Strongest Bank Vault Ever Constructed

The vault which will hold the securities and moneys of one of the great trust companies in New York in the bank's new building now under construction is the strongest ever built. It will accommodate 160 safes. The illustration shows the main door of the vault closed. This door weighs thirty-nine tons and is thirty-six inches thick, exclusive of the bolt frame, which is nine inches high. The emergency door and frame weigh forty-one and a half tons. An idea of their size may be gained by comparison with the man standing in front of them. The building is 540 feet high and has forty stories, four of which are below the street level. It is the highest bank building in the world. On the site of the building in Revolutionary days stood the John Simmons tavern, at which the banquet in celebration of the evacuation of New York by the British was held and in which James Duane was inaugurated as the first American mayor of New York.

New York, Nov. 27.—Like the keeping and walling of a lost soul is the report issued today by the National Association of Manufacturers, based on a canvass of 67 general industries.

The report says that business this year has been worse than last year, and that the prospect for 1912 is discouraging unless political agitation can be checked.

CHINESE REBELS FIRE ON NANKING

YUAN LOSES HIS GRIP

Premier Is Flouted From Peking to Yangtskiang.

Peking, Nov. 27.—It is becoming more and more apparent every day that Yuan Shih Kai's task is hopeless.

His control of affairs is merely nominal in Peking and his authority is flouted southward to the Yangtze-kiang. His attempts to form a cabinet have hitherto failed and none of his appointees to the chief posts has accepted.

The Chinese newspapers print the strangest reports about the republican movement and boldly speculate on the coming republican cabinet. The list of prospective ministers contains the names of Sun Yat Sen as president, General Li Yuan Hang as premier, Wu Ting Fang as minister of foreign affairs, Admiral San Chen Ping as secretary of the navy and General Huai Hsin as minister of war.

Taft, Harmon and Wilson Also Said to Favor Proposition For People of State to Name Favorite as Their Party's Nominee For Presidency in 1912—Lawyers Who Have Studied Bronson Law Declare Preference Primary Not Included.

Columbus, O., Nov. 27.—Lawyers who have carefully examined the Bronson primary election law entertain doubt that a presidential primary can be held in Ohio.

The popular will will be expressed in the selection of all the delegates from this state to the Republican and Democratic national conventions. To each of these national conventions will be sent two delegates from each of the congressional districts who will be elected by primary vote. Six delegates-at-large to each of these conventions will be elected by the party state convention which will be composed of delegates either elected by direct primaries or by county conventions which, in turn, will be composed of delegates elected by direct vote.

To go a step further and enable the voters of the party to instruct the district delegates to support a particular candidate for president, and to instruct the delegates to the state convention similarly to instruct, in turn, the delegates-at-large, is claimed for by the anti-Taft leaders and is understood to be favored by the Taft leaders in the Republican party, and is being considered by the Harmon leaders, and will be demanded. It is expected, by the Wilson leaders in the Democratic party.

A popularity contest in each party can be arranged in several ways, but can it be conducted by law and at the regular primaries?

Falls Companion With Shot.

Sweeping Opinion by Hogan May Cause Complications In Memorial Hall Matter

Lengthy Opinion Contains Eleven Pages of Closely Type-written Matter and Gives History of Legislation.

Under the Law Applicable to Prosecutor Gregg's Question It is Held That the Building Has Been Completed and Should Have Been Surrendered.

No Authority in Law, Hogan Holds, for Expenditure for Tablets. Other Than for Soldiers Who Enlisted in This County and Lost Their Lives in the Service.

WAY IS POINTED OUT

By Which All Unpleasant Complications Which Might Arise Owing to a Strict Technical Construction, May Be Avoided.

In an exhaustive opinion given out Saturday, November 25th and received here Monday morning, Attorney General Hogan announces his views of the law as to the rights and liabilities of the Memorial Hall trustees.

The question of the right of the trustees to retain possession of the building up to the present time, the question as to whether or not the building was completed within the meaning of the law before the work of installing the marble memorial tablets was finished, the right of the trustees to contract for the erection of the number of tablets which they did contract for, containing the names of all of the soldiers who enlisted in the war of the rebellion from this county, have each and all of them been mooted during the last half dozen years.

Matters were brought to a crisis when Attorney C. E. Baugh representing forty-nine members of the G. A. R. who signed a petition, filed that document with the county commissioners asking that the trustees be required to resign their offices, account for their stewardship and turn over all funds found to be due.

The commissioners upon the filing of the petition requested the trustees to meet with them, called in Prosecuting Attorney Pope Gregg to ferred to with the expressed opinion that the effect of that amendment was to vest in the county commissioners the power and duty of providing for the equipment, decoration and furnishing of a building not previously equipped, decorated and furnished "which duty had formerly in all probability been vested in the trustees."

General Hogan holds that under the act of 1871, which is quoted in full, it is made the mandatory duty of the Board of Trustees to install the memorial tablets provided for in the law:

"Such tablets are therefore, in my opinion, a part of the original construction of the building and are not articles of decoration or equipment, as might otherwise be the case."

He holds that despite the act of 1906 it was not the duty of the trustees to turn over the building until such tablets were installed.

"This conclusion fully answers your question, but I may add for the sake of completeness that the trustees under the act of 1871 are officers of the court and not of the county; that their duty is to account from time to time to the court."

Upon final completion, the opinion states, of their trust, their final account should be filed with the court.

A clear right the attorney general says, exists under the act of 1906, in the county to compel an accounting to the court by the trustees.

Then follows a copy of a second letter of inquiry from Prosecutor Gregg in which he asked for an opinion as to whether or not the trustees have a right to continue in charge of the building after its completion and assume the management and control except the placing of the tablets, collect the rents and pay the bills, or whether under the statute that duty devolves on the commissioners. Prosecutor Gregg states further:

"My opinion as to the above inquiries is: First that under the circumstances above stated, the duty to manage the building, and collect the rents would devolve on the county commissioners and that only the names of soldiers that were killed in the Civil war or war of the Rebellion, could be legally engraved upon said tablets."

Answering this the attorney general states that he at a loss to determine under what authority the trustees can collect the rents when the building is primarily a monument but having done so he holds that they should account for receipts which came to their hands.

"While the trustees may continue to the exercise of their trust for the purpose of installing the tablets, yet if the building is fit for use the commissioners are and have been since 1906 the only constituted authority to permit its use and to arrange the terms on which it shall be permitted.

The act of 1896 is eliminated from consideration because nothing therein is found applicable to the question submitted.

Taking up the act of 1902 next, the attorney general calls attention to the fact that the board originally appointed consisted of seven members while the act of 1871 provided for five trustees showing he claims conclusively that the act of 1902 was not the controlling act.

Upon a careful investigation of the matter entailing some expenditure of time and money which, the attorney general holds, would have been unnecessary had a complete statement of facts been submitted, that the building was constructed under the act of 1871.

The fact that under the act of 1892 which was repealed in 1896, a considerable sum of money was raised for the purpose of constructing a soldiers' monument, which sum was held by the commissioners without authority to expend the same by the repeal of the act, and that subsequently in 1905 seven trustees were appointed to take charge of the monument fund and its accumulations and these trustees elected under the discretion vested in them to erect a monumental building and that all the proceedings of the trustees have been referable to the act of 1871 and its amendments.

Then follow lengthy quotations from the law as it existed in 1905.

The amendment of 1906 is then related. In conclusion it is stated that the clear answer to the second question in the prosecutor's letter is found in the law, viz., it is only the names of all persons who entered the Union army from the county, during the rebellion, and lost their lives therein which must be inscribed upon the memorial tablets.

Tablets containing the names of any other persons such as soldiers who left the county during the war of the Rebellion, but did not lose their lives therein would not be memorial tablets within the meaning of the section.

It would be beyond the scope of the power of the trustees to install such tablets.

If such tablets are installed at all it must be by the commissioners who have the power under the act of 1906 to provide for the decoration of the building.

The trustees say that they consulted with the commissioners as to what the tablets should contain and in making the arrangement for the tablets as that arrangement has been made, they acted after consultation with and assent by the commissioners, who desired that the names of all soldiers, who enlisted from Fayette county be inscribed on the tablets.

MYSTERY UNRAVELING

Baker Family, Arrested for Murder of George Tharr, Confesses That Tharr's Death Took Place in Their House, But Maintain That It Was Caused by Fall Down Stairs.

The deep mystery surrounding the death of George Tharr in Cedarville on the night of October 21, is slowly unravelling, and within the next few days it is expected that it will be cleared up and if Tharr was murdered, his murderer will be known.

Sallie Baker and her two sons, Frank and James, who were first arrested for Tharr's murder, were arrested again last week, and on Saturday morning one of the Baker boys confessed that Tharr had died in their house, but his death was accidental, claiming that the man fell down the stairway while intoxicated, and was dead when found.

Mrs. Baker later admitted this to be true. However their stories varied somewhat, and the authorities are not certain whether Tharr's death was accidental, or whether he was murdered. George Stafford, a neighbor of the Bakers, was implicated in the affair, and is said to have been the one who suggested that Tharr's body be removed from the house, and who assisted in removing it. Stafford is said to be in the bootlegging business, and probably sold Tharr the liquor which caused him to become drunk, if he really was drunk and fell down the stairway.

One story that Frank Baker had killed Tharr by striking him across the head with a piece of a board in which nail protruded, caused Baker to grow very nervous while being examined by the officers. The affair has created a big sensation in Cedarville.

"Cyclone" Preacher Wife Gets Divorce

Wilson, known throughout central and southern Ohio and West Virginia as the "Cyclone" evangelist, is now minus his wife and four children, a divorce being awarded Demina Wilson a few days ago in the Meigs county courts.

Mrs. Wilson was awarded a decree of divorce, $10 a month alimony, and custody of her four children. She secured the divorce upon the grounds of habitual drunkenness, extreme cruelty and failure to provide.

Wilson held a several weeks' meeting at Sedalia, Madison county, and at Five Points in Pickaway county a few years ago. He is a native of Gallia county, and one of the most unusual characters of the state. He has been a successful evangelist and numbers his converts by the thousands, but he could not break away from the drug habit.

GOOD MIXERS.

Many a man has gone rapidly to the front rank of success in his profession, his business or in the political game, largely on account of his ability to exhibit his better side to his friends and acquaintances, largely on account of his being, as the world has come to generally express it, a good mixer.

Many men enjoy the fruits of a reputation for ability which is not deserved and which is freely and generally accorded them because they possess that happy faculty of being able to mix properly with the world.

In the larger cities men of very mediocre of ability in their profession are maintaining large and splendidly furnished office suits and employing a corps of clerks at modest salary to attend to the important business which comes to the office. Frequently these mediocres, inferior clerks know more about the profession which they are practicing than their employer, who simply coins money and doles out to the men who do the real work, a mere pittance.

In these days of large affairs, however, the man who makes a specialty of "four-flushing" his way through the world has not the easy picking he once had. The world has come to demand that every man deliver the goods at some stage of his career and the adoption of this rule has kept many counterfeits from passing current and has measurably checked the career of those who were going at a lively clip on false pretenses.

The political game as it was played a decade ago furnished the ideal field of operations for the hand-shaker and the grandstand player. That type flourished in the days when talk and noise was too frequently mistaken for logic and principle.

Everyday the world is more and more inclined to measure men and reward men for what they do rather than for what they say and promise.

Men of real worth and real ability are beginning to receive something nearer the proper measure of credit and this being deducted from the abundance handed out heretofore with profligacy to the quacks and demagogues it follows necessarily that the "mixers" are not reaping the harvest they once reaped.

The ability to show off in public without becoming disgusting, coupled with real merit as a foundation, makes the ideal combination for the successful man. The possession of these admirable qualifications for a successful career are rare, though.

Many are handicapped by their inability to properly exhibit themselves in public and many counterfeits show to better advantage than their real merit warrants. Hence it remains for the slow-going world to wait for them to prove by deeds what is really underneath the veneer whether that veneer be one of pleasing or repelling personality and withholding its final judgment until that time accords each individual his proper place.

The man of pleasing personality gets his chance first, but he must make good while the man who doesn't make such a good impression at first may be longer in coming into his own he is likely to maintain himself longer and grow steadily more powerful because he has the real material in his makeup.

There is no denying the fact that we still have the quacks and good mixers with us in great numbers, but the opportunity for success is being curtailed each day and that is some consolation.

ROBERT J. SPRAGUE of the Massachusetts Agricultural College

Yankee Race Will Have Soon Become Extinct

THE YANKEE RACE IS THREATENED WITH EXTINCTION. RUGS AND AUTOMOBILES ARE IN PART TO BLAME FOR THE FALLING OFF OF THE BIRTH RATE.

We conceal our lovemaking. Romance should be frank and open. We make it morbid. Many of our young men would be getting along better after five years if they asked their friends to find their wives, for the present basis of choice is often blind infatuation.

A woman may work like a slave indoors, get indigestion and have nervous prostration, but must NOT EXERCISE IN THE OPEN AIR FOR ECONOMIC ENDS lest she LOSE HER SOCIAL STANDING and her husband lose his as well. This is race suicide, for the Almighty has declared that any race that endures must breathe air. Our trouble is not that we love children less, but that we LOVE ORIENTAL RUGS AND AUTOMOBILES MORE.

Factory regulations to compel better ventilation and healthful conditions in general are essential. Get HEALTH, VITALITY AND EARNING POWER and race suicide will not be a pertinent consideration.

MAN CONDITIONS, THE STEAM HEATED HOUSE, THE WEARY YEARS IN UNHEALTHY CROWDED SCHOOLROOMS, THE LACK OF WORKING, FREE EXERCISE IN THE OPEN AIR, ALL SUGGEST THE VITALITY OF YOUTHFUL PARENTS.

POETRY Today

A SERIRE

There is a shrine whose golden gate
Was opened by the hand of God.
It stands serene, inviolate,
Though millions have its pavement
trodden;

As fresh as when the first sunrise
Awoke the lark in Paradise.

Tis compassed with the dust and toll
Of common days, yet should there fall

A single streak, a single soil,
Upon the whiteness of its wall,
The angels' tears in tender rain
Would make the temple theirs again.

Without the world is tired and old,
But once within the enchanted
door,
The mists of time are backward rolled.

And creeds and ages are no more,
But all the human-hearted meet
In one Communion vast and sweet.

I enter: all is simply fair,
Nor incense clouds, nor cavern throne,

But in the fragrant morning air
A gentle lady sits alone;

My mother—ah! whom should I see Within, save over only thee?

—Digby Mackworth-Dobson, in London Spectator.

THE REASONABLE WAY.

Strong vigorous men, women and children hardly ever catch cold—it's only when your system is run down and vitality low that colds and coughs can get a foothold.

Now isn't it reasonable that the right way to cure a cough is to build up your strength again?

Mr. Patrick Wren of N. Birmingham, Ala., knows about this. He says, "I caught a bad cold a year ago and had a bad cough for long time, but Vinol relieved it completely and built up my health. Vinol is the best medicine I ever used or heard of for coughs and colds."

This splendid cod liver and iron remedy does not smell or taste like cod liver oil, but is so delicious that children love to take it. Yet it has the strengthening value of cod liver oil, with tonic, blood-building iron.

Chronic bronchitis yields to Vinol because it builds up the system in all weakened and rundown conditions.
You can get your money back any time if Vinol does not do all we say.

One-Time Method of Punishing Scolding Wives

A Few of These Relics of an Ancient Custom Are Still to Be Seen in Small English Villages.

London.—Nowadays when a man has a scolding wife in full action he lights his pipe and lies to his club.
In the "good old days" he stayed at home, sent for the village beadle and consigned his wife, on legal warrant, to the ducking stool. A few of these chairs of punishment are still to be seen in out of the way corners of England. The wags are suggesting they should be used for violent suffragettes, thus saving the expense of board in Holloway jail.

One of them is shown at Fordwich, close to the Kentish cathedral town of Canterbury, to illustrate just how the old-time tormagants had their ire cooled by their neighbors. It was attached by a rope and pulley to a beam fixed to a substantial post which was driven into the bank. The chair was thus suspended over the water and the rope and pulley enabled the owner to lower it to the water or raise it at will. When the woman of the restless tongue had been adjudged guilty of persistent scolding or spiteful talebearing she was seated by the village beadle and his assistants, who placed her in the chair with her arms drawn downwards. Then they put a bar between her back and her elbows.
Another bar held her upright, and to make quite sure she would not wrig-gle out of position she was also tied to the seat. The milions of the law then worked the ropes, ducking her in and out of the water till she promised to be good.

This way of punishing scolds commenced in the fifteenth century and lasted into the beginning of the nineteenth century. There is a ducking stool at Leominster that was used as recently as 1899, but public opinion after that put a stop to the rough and ready method of correcting feminine wainshiness.

This was not the worst thing that could happen to a wrongdoer in Ford-

Washing Away Their Guilt

Banaras is the holy city of the Hindus, one in their traditions to be said to have been created with creation. Its three miles of frontage on the Ganges is occupied chiefly by great flights of steps or ghats where crowds of classes spend the day in business, amusement or devotion. In the course of the river itself there are always throngs of pilgrims to be seen bathing to wash away their sins.

TOLD ON THE GOLF LINKS

The story of a remarkable incident in a recent golf match on the links at Balmoral is going the rounds of London society. A distinguished member of King George's staff at a critical moment apparently failed to loft his ball as much as he may have intended in making an approach stroke.
The ball was seen to hit a cow. The animal moved off unconcernedly. The gentleman went to the spot vacated by the cow, but could not find the ball. He turned to the animal, which at that moment shook her head. The movement caused the ball to roll out of her ear.

This incident has revived other tales. Once a very long driver picked off a sheep which was grazing on the edge of the fifth bunker. The animal seemed pained by the blow. She observed a lamb grazing between her self and the place from where the blow had come. She probably imagined herself a victim of disrespect, and butted her offspring over the cliff into the sand.

MOUNT OF OLIVES CHURCH

Recent excavations at the summit of the Mount of Olives have resulted in the discovery of the remains of a Christian church dating from about A.D. 330. The site is thought to be the spot fixed by the oldest traditions as the place where Christ taught his disciples how to pray. The floor of the nave is not yet uncovered, but that of the transept is fully exposed.
The floor is of mosaic and is perfectly preserved. In the chancel there are two separate floors of different designs, one 30 inches higher than the other. The lower level is thought to be floor of St. Helena's church, while the upper is believed to be a restoration by Crusaders. A baptismal pool was found in the south transept bearing a quite legible inscription of the name "Theodorus," in Greek letters.

Sage Tea Will Darken Faded And Gray Hair

There is nothing new about the idea of using sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our great-grandmothers kept their locks soft, dark and glossy by using a "sage tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance they made a brew of sage leaves and applied it to their hair, with wonderfully beneficial effect.

Nowadays we don't have to resort to old-time, tiresome methods of gathering the herbs and making the tea. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves, and all we have to do is to call for the ready-made product Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, containing sage in the proper strength, with the addition of sulphur, another old-time scalp remedy.

The manufacturers of this remedy authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

Don't neglect your hair. Get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur today, and notice the difference after a few days' use.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special agent, Brown's Drug Store.

RULES FOR RIGHT LIVING

Frederic Harrison, Who Is Alive at Eighty, Gives His Views on Subject.

Frederic Harrison, barrister, historian, philosopher, publicist, positivist and anti-woman's suffragette, celebrated his eightieth birthday recently in London. In spite of his great age, Mr. Harrison is still hale and hearty, and his intellectual activity is occasionally evidenced in acutely reasoned letters to the press. A self-disciplinarian, he attributes his physical and mental fitness to the rigid observance of his own Spartan "rules of life." Here they are: "Touch not tobacco, spirit, nor any unclean thing. Rise from every meal with an appetite. Walk daily two hours. Sleep nightly seven hours. Be content with what you have."

Playing cards and tobacco are Mr. Harrison's aversions. "Men and women," he says, "who are too dull to take pleasure in talk, too ignorant to read, too lazy to dance, deaf to music, blind to art, unable to keep themselves awake, betake themselves to cards." As for my Lady Nicotine, he cannot find words strong enough to denounce her with. Smoking is "a beastly disease," to be shunned on grounds medical, moral, social and esthetic.

Mr. Harrison, however, is better known as the greatest living disciple of Auguste Comte than as a social Don Quixote. His presidential addresses to the Positivist society are said by good judges to contain some of the finest "high thinking" in the English language. In view of these and other virtues, people here are proud to hail him a grand old Londoner, born and educated within the sound of the bells of Bow.

CRAFTY PRELUDE OF SHOPPER

Preliminary Skirmish by Which She Insures Best Service When Real Campaign Begins.

Chicago people certainly have the knack of getting on," a shopper said. "In the suit department of a big store I met a Chicago woman who had been in Philadelphia less than a week. She said she wasn't buying anything; had just come to get the lay of the land. In the process of getting it she stopped a cash girl and said:

"Is that Miss Blake selling white linen skirts to that fat woman? I understand you have a Miss Blake in this department."

"No, that is Miss Barton," said the cash girl.

"This Chicago woman wrote the name in her address book. Then she showed me the names of saleswomen in several other stores."

"This is only a preliminary to real shopping," she said. "It pays me to take the extra trouble. If I expect to buy more than $5 worth of anything at a strange store I learn beforehand the names of the saleswomen whose looks I like best."

"Then when I go back to buy, I can say, as I shall do here tomorrow, 'I would like Miss Barton to wait on me,' and although Miss Barton has never set eyes on me, the fact that I can call her by name gives her the impression that she must have sold me a $100 dress at some time and I get twice as good service as I would get if I knew nobody by name."

The Moral

Prof. John Spencer Bassett, author of "A Life of Andrew Jackson," is accustomed to illustrate his lectures at Smith college with incidents in American history. On one occasion he repeated a well-known story in regard to Stephen A. Douglas, closing with a moral which aroused peculiar interest.

Douglas, as a narrative runs, was once sitting in a profound sleep in the corridor of the capitol when Adeline Cutts, a Washington belle, passed by. She did not know the sleeper, but was struck with compassion on seeing such a splendidly intellectual face under such conditions, and stooping down laid her handkerchief over it to protect it from the flies. Douglas on awakening found the handkerchief, sought the owner, and eventually married her. There was a pause, and then the professor added: "You ladies, the moral of this story is: Have your pocket handkerchief marked."

Water Elephants in Africa. The scientific world is still discussing the reported discovery of a new mammal in the Congo state, a mammal known to the natives as the "water elephant." M. Le Petit of the Paris Museum of Natural History recently reported that he saw five of these animals plunging into the water on the northern shore of Lake Leopold the Second. He stated that they appeared to have shorter bodies, smaller ears, and relatively longer necks than ordinary elephants, and apparently were not possessed of trunks. He estimated their height at about six feet. It has been pointed out that the description of the water elephant accords almost exactly with Dr. Andrews' restoration of the palaeomastodon, a creature which dwelt in the Fayoum in the lower tertiary age.

His Mistake.

"Say, there's a page of this China special stuff missing. Anybody seen it?"

"Eh! What was it?" "Why, a list of the leading insurance companies."

"Holy smoke! Was that it? Say, I thought it was the bill of fare of the new Chinese restaurant and chuck it in the waste basket."

THE SOCIALISTS WOULD CURB STATE GUARD IN GRANTING POWERS

Instruct Their One Constitutional Delegate.

Columbus, O., Nov. 27.—Instructions, subject to the approval of the state committee, were issued by the state executive committee of the Socialist party to Harry D. Thomas of Cleveland, the only Socialist elected as party candidate as delegate to the constitutional convention. Mr. Thomas was instructed not to participate in the vote on president and secretary of the convention, not to vote for more than 15 per cent in the initiative and referendum and to work for 5 per cent. Other instructions favored woman's suffrage and amendment of the constitution by a majority vote.

Mr. Thomas also was instructed when the constitution as a whole comes up for approval by the convention to offer as a substitute the Socialist program and to move its adoption.

Of the 14 propositions contained in the Ohio party's bill of rights, three were recommended to Mr. Thomas as worthy of his especial labor as constitutional delegate. These are:

"The military shall at all times be held in strict subordination to the civil authorities. Civil government of this state shall never be replaced or suspended by martial law. The state militia and the police power shall never interfere in industrial disputes.

"The right of the state and all counties, municipalities or other divisions of the state to engage in any enterprise, business or occupation shall not be denied or prohibited.

"No private police or constabulary shall be allowed to operate in this state or to give testimony in any court."

Option Election Date Set.

St. Clairsville, O., Nov. 27.—Judge Lynch set Saturday, Dec. 16, as the date for a vote in Belmont county under the Rose law.

Headache? It's Your Liver

Too Many People Take Headache Powders When a Liver Tonic Is Needed.

Try Olive Tablets—the Substitute for Calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are the one substitute for dangerous calomel. They do all of calomel's work without any of its bad after effects.

There is no necessity, when you take Olive Tablets, of following them up with nasty, sickening, griping salts or castor oil, as you should after taking calomel.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel or any other metallic drugs; they are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil, sugar-coated, easy to take, and never gripe or cause weakness.

Thousands of people take one every night at bedtime just to prevent disorder of the liver, constipation, bad breath, pimples, headache, etc.

Olive Tablets are made of pure vegetable compounds mixed with olive oil.

Dr. Edwards, calomel's old enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with liver and bowel troubles.

Try them for a week. Take one on retiring nightly.

"Every little Olive Tablet has a movement all its own."

All druggists sell Olive Tablets in neat pocket packages. At 10c and 25c.

Thanksgiving Menu In Penitentiary

In Ohio's big prison the prisoners will enjoy much the same dinner as their more fortunate brothers on the outside, and even better than a great many persons.

Thanksgiving in the prison is always looked forward to with a great deal of anticipation by all of the prisoners, who, while they have ample food to satisfy their hunger, naturally grow tired of the everyday prison "grub."

Thursday the menu for Thanksgiving is: Roast turkey, giblet dressing, cream gravy, cranberry sauce, browned and buttered sweet potatoes, celery, mince pie, apples, bread, coffee and cigars. Prisoners in the Ohio penitentiary fare much better than they did a half score of years ago.

HIS SECURITY WAS ASSURED

Man With Wooden Leg Had No Fear of Slipping on Polished Floor.

One of New York's leading actors has an elegant country home out in Long Island, and he has spent a great deal of money in fitting it up with costly decorations and exquisite furnishings. The library was recently refurnished with a most expensive floor of beautiful parquetry, in which the owner felt a great degree of pride and of which he was scrupulously careful.

A few days ago an old friend of the good old road days learned how well he was prospering and went out to call on him. He had met with reverses financially, and also with the physical misfortune of an amputated leg, in place of which he wore a wood.

When the servant announced him in the library the host went in and was horrified to see the man stumping about the floor with the wooden leg, in a tour of inspection of its gorgeous fittings. Speechless at first, he was finally able to breathe a gentle hint to his friend:

"I say, Henry, old fellow, hadn't you better keep well in on the rug? I'm so deucedly afraid you might slip and get a fall."

"Oh, no! That's all right," assured the guest. "Don't you worry about me. I'm all right, thanks. There is a couple of nails in the end of the old peg, you know."—Judge's Library.

TO PUBLISH POET'S LETTERS

Interesting Collection of Correspondence of One of France's Greatest Poets Discovered.

An interesting literary discovery has been made, an immense collection of the correspondence of Marcelline Desbordes-Valmore, the greatest of the women poets of nineteenth century France. The letters included in it were bought one by one from the autograph dealers by her son Hippolyte Valmore. He annotated them and meant to publish them; but when he died a bachelor of 72 about twenty years ago, there was no mention of his intentions in his will.

The albums then fell into the hands of his servant, who was ignorant of their value but did not destroy them. Finding them too cumbersome to carry about with her she gave them away. The recipient preserved them, though without attaching any particular importance to them; and now at last they have attracted the attention of a collector and are to be edited and published in the course of the autumn.

The Gloom Poet.
In the course of a week a large number of poems reach this office, most of them written by persons with little experience in verse making, says the Kansas City Star. The striking thing about the output, however, is not that so many persons who have never written poetry should be experimenting with it, but that nine-tenths of them should be so melancholy. It is ideal for children.

Saturday he issued a statement in which he warned the physicians of Portsmouth not to engage in any combined effort to increase the fees charged their patients. The doctors have been considering an increase in their fee bill, and the proposed action caused a great deal of comment. Judge Blair holds that when physicians unite to increase their fees and that such action would be investigated by the grand jury.

A careful reading of several hundred poems of this type does not leave the impression that the writers are such a gloomy lot as they might appear. One comes to believe that most of them are normally cheerful, but that somehow they have been led to suppose that sadness belongs to poetry.*More Used to Horses.

Here is a story that J. O. Chenoweth tells on William Grafeman, the ice cream manufacturer:

Grafeman had been having engine trouble with his motor car, and after each trip to the repair shop the same trouble recurred, only worse.

Finally, in desperation, Grafeman called on his friend, Emil Gartner, who owns a machine of the same kind, and asked him to look the car over and see if he could find out what was wrong. Gartner carefully inspected the engine and listened to its ca-chug, ca-chug. Then, turning to Grafeman, he announced that there was nothing wrong with the engine except that one of its cylinders was "missing."

"What?" exclaimed Grafeman, incredulous. "I'm positive all four of them were there when I left the garage."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Sensitive.

"You've lost him for good this time," said the master barber to one of his assistants as a customer went out and slammed the door behind him.

"Yes, but I forgot."

"That's no excuse. If you can't attend to business, you must go."

"What's the trouble?" inquired a customer.

"He didn't brush the gentleman's head."

"But his head was a bald as an egg!"

"Certainly, and that is why he should have brushed it. Bald-headed men are very sensitive; you must use the brush the same as if they had plenty of hair. To do so gives them an idea that you don't take particular notice of their baldness."

"And won't that customer return?"

"Never. He'll try some other barber's next time, and will even advise his friends to avoid this."

IRREGULAR HOURS SAPS VITALITY

Manner of Living in the United States Taxes Ones Reserve Power to Its Limit.

In a recent interview one of the physicians who are introducing the remarkable new tonic "Tona Vita" to the American public, had this to say:

"The manner of living in the larger cities of the United States is such that perfect health is almost impossible; the human machine will not run true and strong day after day with its vitality continually being sapped by the constant nervous strain. Irregular hours, hasty eating food, the wear and tear and rush of city life, are largely responsible for the immense amount of dull, listless, half-sick people of the present generation. Debility or a 'run down' condition as it is called is everywhere. Half the people I see in street cars, restaurants, theaters, or on the street, are unmistakably in a debilitated condition, with their nerves in such a state that they either wish to lie down and rest or rush after some excitement."

"Any one who has met a constant stream of nervous debilitated people as I have since I began my present work, can tell a man or woman in this condition at a glance. I wish to emphatically state that the number of debilitated people in the larger American cities, is appalling."

"Tona Vita," the medicine I am helping introduce, is to combat this condition. I believe it to be the best preparation ever before sold to the public, in that it is immediately effective in cases of debility and other troubles that go hand in hand with this disease."

You can not hope to enjoy life or meet with much success if you are tired all the time, have little ambition, and feel continually depressed in mind and body. Every half-sick, worn-out man or woman, owes it to themselves and their family, to try Tona Vita. If the tonic does not make life more worth living, and brings back the healthy, energetic spirit, that is now lacking, the price is refunded.

Brown's Drug Store has the agency for "Tona Vita" in Washington C. H., also for Lee's Rhubarb Laxative, the purest and best family laxative on the market. Lee's Rhubarb Laxative will not injure the most delicate constitution. It would otherwise be forgotten, is the most appropriate and humane.

Dr. and Mrs. Hodson have built and equipped a Memorial Hospital at Washington C. H., which provides the most approved and complete arrangements for the treatment of both surgical and medical cases.

The hospital is as much at the disposal of other physicians as Dr. Hodson. It is conducted entirely without the idea of profit and is receiving constant gifts and calls for continual outlay on the part of the donors.

It is indeed a fitting tribute to their son and a most timely gift, as there is no other hospital nearer than Columbus forty miles distant.

Edmond Hodson's earthly life is closed, but the Memorial Hospital stands as a precious monument to his memory, not only a benefit to this, but to future generations, as others seeing the beautiful tribute will be like minded and, we believe, will erect other hospitals in memory of loved ones.

John Haggard of this city, who assisted in the arrest of Charles Gillsdorf in Washington a few days before the man killed Gilbert Rieder in Chillicothe on July 3rd, was summoned to Chillicothe to give testimony in the trial of Gillsdorf, who is being tried on a lunacy charge. Haggard will be one of the important witnesses.

The trial was set for Monday morning. One of the most important witnesses in the case disappeared Saturday, and the prosecutor could not locate the man.

Prominent Physician Pays Tribute To Hodson Hospital

Dr. George H. Quay, dean of the Cleveland-Pulte Medical college, a recent visitor in our city, pays tribute to the Edmond Hodson Memorial Hospital and its estimable worth to this community, in the following article published in the Cleveland Medical and Surgical Reporter. The article voices the opinion of leading physicians in the northern part of the state:

A BEAUTIFUL MEMORIAL.

A most fitting memorial to their son has been presented to the community by Doctor and Mrs. George S. Hodson, of Washington C. H., Ohio, in the form of a well equipped hospital known as The Edmond Hodson Memorial Hospital.

Their son, who was an only child, was attending college at Wesleyan and was expecting to make the practice of medicine his life work. Any physician who believes in his work and is successful, can understand what such a prospect means to a father as he anticipates the advancing years. The hope of Dr. Hodson was not to be realized. Edmond died last winter.

It indicates a fine and discriminating sense to choose a fitting memorial. The time has past when high thinking men and women are content with cold marble, no matter how costly. Something which will embody the idea of service and benefaction and continue to bless and heal the world after one's name would otherwise be forgotten, is the most appropriate and humane.

Dr. and Mrs. Hodson have built and equipped a Memorial Hospital at Washington C. H., which provides the most approved and complete arrangements for the treatment of both surgical and medical cases.

The hospital is as much at the disposal of other physicians as Dr. Hodson. It is conducted entirely without the idea of profit and is receiving constant gifts and calls for continual outlay on the part of the donors.

It is indeed a fitting tribute to their son and a most timely gift, as there is no other hospital nearer than Columbus forty miles distant.

Edmond Hodson's earthly life is closed, but the Memorial Hospital stands as a precious monument to his memory, not only a benefit to this, but to future generations, as others seeing the beautiful tribute will be like minded and, we believe, will erect other hospitals in memory of loved ones.

turkeys were busy, and by the time they were driven to the end of the yard not one of the bright pieces was visible.

"What do you think of that?" Jethro cried.

"Five hundred dollars in gold swallowed by those turkeys!" Elijah said. "What will you do?"

"I'll have to kill them all and get the money out of their crops."

At this moment, Henry Tuttle, whose huckster wagon had been standing down the street, drove up. With just a flicker of a wink he called to Jethro:

"Ready to sell them turkeys?"

"Not now," Jethro said. "Guess I'll have to keep 'em myself."

"Well, tell you what I'll do. I'll give you three dollars apiece for them. Turkeys is goin' up."

"Can't do it, Hen. I hate to try to use them all myself, too."

"Give you three-twenty-five."

"I don't suppose all of 'em got those pieces," Jethro said, in an undertone to Elijah. "I believe I'll take him up on that and let him have ten of 'em."

"I'll give you five dollars apiece for my choice of fifteen of 'em," Elijah declared, promptly.

"Elijah has offered me five dollars apiece for his choice of fifteen," Jethro called to Henry.

"Elijah must be tryin' to corner turkeys," Henry grinned. "Tell you what—I'll give you seven-fifty apiece for the bunch."

"Does he know about what just happened?" Elijah asked.

"He wasn't here. How could he?"

"I'll give you eight apiece for the whole lot."

"Turkeys are in demand, Henry."

Jethro laughed. "Elijah bids eight."

"Well, I'm busy. I've got to be movin' on," Henry asserted. "I'll give you ten."

"They've got to be killed and picked for market," Elijah said. "You must remember that, Jethro. I'll give you eleven-fifty apiece for the turkeys—and their contents. No monkey business about that, is there? I get the whole lot."

"Elijah bids eleven-fifty," Jethro called to Henry.

"Little too steep for me," Henry decided, clucked to his horse and drove on.

"The turkeys are yours," Jethro said.

"Well, now, let's understand this deal," Elijah said. "I'm payin' you eleven-fifty apiece for the turkeys—and their contents. No monkey business about that, is there? I get the whole lot."

"That chauffeur was a great disappointment."

"I thought he would be."

"That's the agreement," Jethro answered. "No specifications whatever, Elijah. It's a plain business transaction."

"Can I kill the turkeys here?"

"It would clutter the place up too much. You can put them in crates and haul them off."

"Well, I've got your five hundred in greenbacks in my pocket yet. Here it is, and here is sixty-three-fifty more. Is that right?"

"Right as a trivet," Jethro agreed, and the deal was closed.

That evening he turned over to Sabina five hundred and sixty-three dollars and fifty cents, telling her what he had done.

"It wasn't honest, Jethro," she objected. "You've got to give it back to Elijah."

Further discussion of this ethical point was interrupted by Elijah, who burst into the house angrily.

"You—you scoundrel!" he shouted, shaking his fist at Jethro. "You robber! You bunco man! There wasn't a thing in those turkey's crops but

Winnie's Thanksgiving

By Donald Allen

I was a girl, I wouldn't go walking too far," said old Uncle Robert, as a girl of twenty passed him on her way down to the gate of the farm house.

"And why not?" she asked, as she almost came to a pause.

"Well, according to my idea, it's going to rain and snow and blow and hail, and when the storm does break, she's going to be a buster."

"I wanted to go to the postoffice to mail a letter."

"It's three miles there and back, and if I was you I'd put it off. Mebbe somebody'll be passing that you can send by. Tomorrow's Thanksgiving, you know, and we are going to have the awfulest, biggest, nicest dinner anybody ever sat down to. It's in your honor, you know. There'll be a turkey, a duck and a chicken; there'll be cranberry sauce, pumpkin pies, currant jell, sweet cider and apple dumplings; there'll be—"

"I think I'll just walk a little ways anyhow," said the girl, as she opened the gate and passed down the highway toward the village and the rail road depot.

"And if you come home as wet as a hen don't say I didn't warn ye. It's going to come, and it's going to be a buster."

Half an hour later a middle-aged woman with a motherly face and voice came out on the steps and asked:

"Pa, do you reckon it's goin' to storm?"

"Sure as ducks."

"Where's Minnie?"

"O, she's gone for a santer. I give her warning. What's she wantin' to mail a letter for? I hain't mailed a letter nor got one in twenty years, and I guess I'm about as well off as most folks. I was going to ask her but forgot it."

"Don't you ask her a word about it," cautioned the wife as she came down to him. "I guess Minnie's got something on her mind, but it hain't none o' your business."

"Something on her mind, eh? That's funny. Didn't know that girls ever had anything on their minds except new clothes. Is that why she come visiting us all of a sudden?"

"None o' your business! I guess my own sister's daughter can come and see me any time she takes a notion, and that without writing ahead. What's on her mind, as nigh as I can make out, is about a young man. They are engaged, and they've had a falling out, and she's sorter run away from him to find out if he really cares for her."

"And she's got scared about it and has written him a letter to tell where she is?" queried the husband.

"Go on! It's probably a letter to her ma, though I didn't see it nor ask. I hope she didn't start for town. It's going to storm for sure, and there hain't but one house on the road where she could find shelter. Look down the road and see if you can see her."

"Can't see hide nor hair of any girl," reported Uncle Robert after going out to the highway and taking a long look.

An hour later, with both uncle and aunt fidgeting about their girl visitor, the gray afternoon had become twilight. In 15 minutes there was cold rain and lively hail, and Uncle Robert was blown into the kitchen.

Miss Minnie had reached town and mailed her letter and started back again when the storm broke. Before it came she thought she could make out a human figure on the road ahead of her, but wasn't sure.

The very first gust picked her up and turned her around and deposited her under a roadside tree. She remained there until the gale began to whip the branches off, and then let go her hold and ran for it.

She hadn't gone a quarter of a mile when, as she crouched and covered her face, she was struck by a falling limb and knew no more.

It was the dim sight of the girl and the scream she uttered when hit, that sent the man who was clinging to the roadside fence back into the highway. He bent over the unconscious form and picked it up and staggered back to the fence and followed it until he saw a light and found the gate of a farmhouse.

His lusty call for help soon brought out a man, and the senseless burden was carried into the house and received by a woman.

"I don't know who she is, but I found her in the road," explained her rescuer. "There is blood on her hair, and I think she was struck down."

"We'll do all we can," replied the man and woman together, "but you mustn't look for much. We are mighty poor folks. We hain't got no camphor nor whisky, and as for getting a doctor out from town—it can't be done tonight."

The girl was carried into the only bedroom and laid on the only bed, and when her wet clothing had been removed and she was between the sheets, the woman got a cloth and a basin of water and washed away the blood and whispered to the stranger:

"I don't think she's bad hurt. She's just fainted away with the scare of it. When she opens her eyes I'll tell her to go to sleep, and she'll be all right in the morning."

"Do you think it's some young lady from the village?" asked the stranger of the farmer as they talked in whispers in the outer room.

"No, I don't reckon so. I reckon it's that new girl that arrived at Turner's a few days ago. I saw her going towards the village two hours ago."

"Arrived at Turner's! Say, man, are you sure? Is it a strange girl to the neighborhood?"

"I heard say it was Uncle Bob's niece, and that she come from the city. What ails you, stranger? Does this storm upset you?"

It wasn't the storm. Percy Kincaid had quarreled with the girl he loved and had asked to be his wife. It was about nothing, almost, as most lovers quarrels are, but pride on either side held off a reconciliation until the lover finally learned that Miss Minnie had gone on a journey and left no word for him.

She was going to spend Thanksgiving week in the country. Within two days she had relented; within three he was making every effort to locate her, that he might patch up a peace.

He had succeeded. He was going to throw himself on her mercy and ask Uncle Robert for a place at his Thanksgiving table.

The storm grew fiercer as the night advanced. When another day came even the cattle could not face the storm nor man move from his door. It was Thanksgiving day. At Uncle Robert's there was a feast to be spread;

*The cattle on a thousand hills,
The wild bird with his thrilling trills,
Fish of the sea—the lion, bear,
All yield to Thy protecting care;
May all creation own Thy sway,
Thou God of this Thanksgiving Day.*

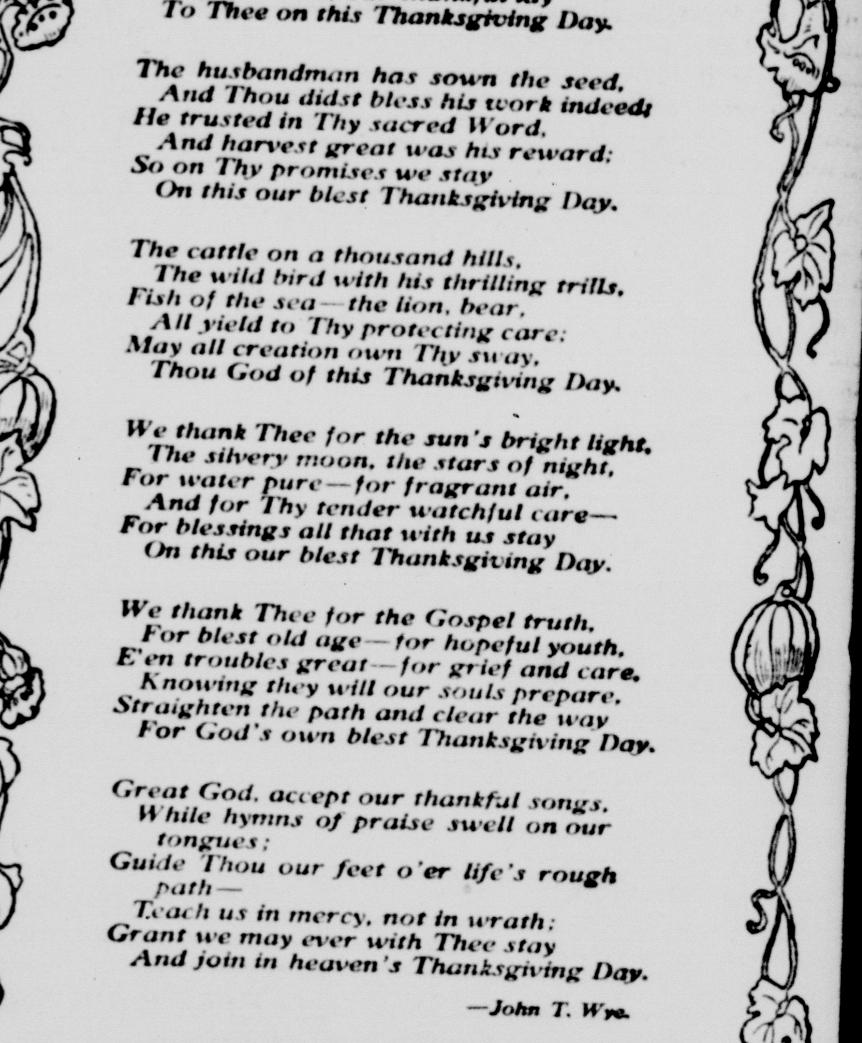

*We thank Thee for the sun's bright light,
The silvery moon, the stars of night,
For water pure—for fragrant air,
And for Thy tender watchful care—
For blessings all that with us stay
On this our blest Thanksgiving Day.*

*We thank Thee for the Gospel truth,
For blest old age—for hopeful youth,
E'en troubles great—for grief and care,
Knowing they will our souls prepare,
Straighten the path and clear the way
For God's own blest Thanksgiving Day.*

*Great God, accept our thankful songs,
While hymns of praise swell on our tongues;
Guide Thou our feet o'er life's rough path—
Teach us in mercy, not in wrath;
Grant we may ever with Thee stay
And join in heaven's Thanksgiving Day.*

turkeys were busy, and by the time they were driven to the end of the yard not one of the bright pieces was visible.

"What do you think of that?" Jethro cried.

"Five hundred dollars in gold swallowed by those turkeys!" Elijah said.

"What will you do?"

"I'll have to kill them all and get the money out of their crops."

At this moment, Henry Tuttle, whose buckster wagon had been standing down the street, drove up. With just a flicker of a wink he called to Jethro:

"Ready to sell them turkeys?"

"Not now," Jethro said. "Guess I'll have to keep 'em myself."

"Well, tell you what I'll do. I'll give you three dollars apiece for them. Turkeys is goin' up."

"Can't do it, Hen. I hate to try to use them all myself, too."

"Give you three-twenty-five."

"I don't suppose all of 'em got those pieces," Jethro said, in an undertone to Elijah. "I believe I'll take him up on that and let him have ten of 'em."

"I'll give you five dollars apiece for my choice of fifteen of 'em," Elijah declared, promptly.

"Elijah has offered me five dollars apiece for his choice of fifteen," Jethro called to Henry.

"Elijah must be tryin' to corner turkeys," Henry grinned. "Tell you what—I'll give you seven-fifty apiece for the bunch."

"Does he know about what just happened?" Elijah asked.

"He wasn't here. How could he?" Jethro said.

"I'll give you eight apiece for the whole lot."

"Turkeys are in demand, Henry," Jethro laughed. "Elijah bids eight."

"Well, I'm busy. I've got to be movin' on," Henry asserted. "I'll give you ten."

"They've got to be killed and picked for market," Elijah said. "You must remember that, Jethro. I'll give you eleven-fifty apiece for em just as they stand."

"Elijah bids eleven-fifty," Jethro called to Henry.

"Little too steep for me," Henry decided, clucked to his horse and drove on.

"The turkeys are yours," Jethro said.

"Well, now, let's understand this deal," Elijah said. "I'm payin' you eleven-fifty apiece for the turkeys—and their contents. No monkey business about that, is there? I get the turkeys and their insides, and all, not specifying what is inside of 'em."

"That's the agreement," Jethro answered. "No specifications whatever, Elijah. It's a plain business transaction."

"Can I kill the turkeys here?"

"It would clutter the place up too much. You can put them in crates and haul them off."

"Well, I've got your five hundred in greenbacks in my pocket yet. Here it is, and here is sixty-three-fifty more. Is that right?"

"Right as a trivet," Jethro agreed, and the deal was closed.

That evening he turned over to Sabina five hundred and sixty-three dollars and fifty cents, telling her what he had done.

"It wasn't honest, Jethro," she objected. "You've got to give it back to Elijah."

Further discussion of this ethical point was interrupted by Elijah, who burst into the house angrily.

"You—you scoundrel!" he shouted, shaking his fist at Jethro. "You robber! You buncy man! There wasn't a thing in those turkey's crops but brass pool checks! You swindled me. I'll have the law on you."

I'm paying you eleven-fifty apiece for the turkeys and their contents!

"Well, Elijah," Jethro smiled, easily, "Sabina and I have just been talking the matter over, and I agree with Sabina that it wasn't quite fair to make you take your own medicine. Now, if you'll agree to be reasonable and to take Sabina's turkeys for the interest that is due you, I'll give you back your money. And, of course, she'll have to have plenty of time to pay off the mortgage, because if people found out about your turkey deal they'd make so much fun of you."

"Don't you ask her a word about it," cautioned the wife as she came down to him. "I guess Minnie's got something on her mind, but it hasn't none o' your business."

"Something on her mind, eh? That's funny. Didn't know that girls ever had anything on their minds except new clothes. Is that why she come visiting us all of a sudden?"

"None o' your business! I guess my own sister's daughter can come and see me any time she takes a notion, and that without writing ahead. What's on her mind, as high as I can make out, is about a young man. They're engaged, and they've had a falling out, and she's sorta run away from him to find out if he really cares for her."

"And she's got scared about it and has written him a letter to tell where she is?" queried the husband.

"Go on! It's probably a letter to her ma, though I didn't see it nor ask. I hope she didn't start for town. It's going to storm for sure, and there ain't but one house on the road where she could find shelter. Look down the road and see if you can see her."

"Can't see hide nor hair of any girl," reported Uncle Robert after going out to the highway and taking a long look.

An hour later, with both uncle and aunt fidgeting about their girl visitor, the gray afternoon had become twilight. In 15 minutes there was cold rain and lively hail, and Uncle Robert was blown into the kitchen.

Miss Minnie had reached town and mailed her letter and started back again when the storm broke. Before it came she thought she could make out a human figure on the road ahead of her, but wasn't sure.

The very first gust picked her up and turned her around and deposited her under a roadside tree. She remained there until the gale began to whip the branches off, and then let go her hold and ran for it.

She hadn't gone a quarter of a mile when, as she crouched and covered her face, she was struck by a falling limb and knew no more.

It was the dim sight of the girl and the scream she uttered when hit, that sent the man who was clinging to the roadside fence back into the highway. He beat over the unconscious form and picked it up and staggered back to the fence and followed it until he saw a light and found the gate of a farmhouse.

His lusty calls for help soon brought out a man, and the senseless burden was carried into the house and received by a woman.

"I don't know who she is, but I found her in the road," explained her rescuer. "There is blood on her hair, and I think she was struck down."

"We'll do all we can," replied the

Winnie's Thanksgiving

By Donald Allen

If I was a girl, I wouldn't go walking too far," said old Uncle Robert, as a girl of twenty passed him on her way down to the gate of the farm house.

"And why not?" she asked, as she almost came to a pause.

"Well, according to my idea, it's going to rain and snow and blow and hail, and when the storm does break, she's going to be a buster."

"I wanted to go to the postoffice to mail a letter."

"It's three miles there and back, and if I was you I'd put it off. Mebbe somebody'll be passing that you can send by. Tomorrow's Thanksgiving, you know, and we are going to have the awfulest, biggest, nicest dinner anybody ever sat down to. It's in your honor, you know. There'll be a turkey, a duck and a chicken; there'll be cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie, currant jelly, sweet cider and apple dumplings; there'll be—"

"I think I'll just walk a little ways, anyhow," said the girl, as she opened the gate and passed down the highway toward the village and the rail road depot.

"And if you come home as wet as a hen don't say I didn't warn ye. It's going to come, and it's going to be a buster."

Half an hour later a middle-aged woman with a motherly face and voice came out on the steps and asked:

"Pa, do you reckon it's goin' to storm?"

"Sure as ducks."

"Where's Minnie?"

"O, she's gone for a sante. I give her warning. What's she wantin' to mail a letter for? I hain't mailed a letter nor got one in twenty years and I guess I'm about as well off as most folks. I was going to ask her but forgot it."

"Don't you ask her a word about it," cautioned the wife as she came down to him. "I guess Minnie's got something on her mind, but it hasn't none o' your business."

"Something on her mind, eh? That's funny. Didn't know that girls ever had anything on their minds except new clothes. Is that why she come visiting us all of a sudden?"

"We'll do all we can," replied the

The girl was carried into the only bedroom and laid on the only bed, and when her wet clothing had been removed and she was between the sheets, the woman got a cloth and a basin of water and washed away the blood and whispered to the stranger:

"I don't think she's bad hurt. She's just fainted away with the scare of it. When she opens her eyes I'll tell her to go to sleep, and she'll be all right in the morning."

"Do you think it's some young lady from the village?" asked the stranger of the farmer as they talked in whispers in the outer room.

"No, I don't reckon so. I reckon it's that new girl that arrived at Turner's a few days ago. I saw her going towards the village two hours ago."

"Arrived at Turner's? Say, man, are you sure? Is it a strange girl to the neighborhood?"
